

FLASH CVD PROCESS FOR SYNTHESIS OF CARBON NANOTREES

ABSTRACT

A flash CVD process can be employed to grow micron- and nano-sized tree-like structures, particularly carbon structures on graphite electrodes. This process involves fast cyclic resistive heating of electrodes in an atmosphere of inert gas and hydrocarbons at below atmospheric pressure.